The Panama Canal Museum Collection at the University of Florida

Twelve years after opening, the Panama Canal Museum (PCM) in Seminole, Florida made the decision to transfer their collections to the University of Florida (UF) Libraries. The UF Libraries will preserve and archive the portion of Canal Zone history that encompasses the time of the United States presence in Panama. Uniquely qualified to offer access to these collections, the UF Libraries have one of the largest and most respected Latin American repositories in the nation.

What you can do to help

- Contribute items that have historical significance
- Offer to be a consultant and review photographs and other items
- Support the collections efforts through your tax-deductible contributions
